Why Hopkins Left Pensacola.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—Surgeon Owens read his defense to-day in the court martial on the charge of exceeding his authority in ordering Capt. Ad Hopkins, commandant at Florida navy yard, to go outside of quarantine limits, and counseling him away during the recent yellow fever epidemic in Florida. The surgeon says Captain Hopkins stated he had a telegram from the department to the effect that all officers, who could be spared from the station, should be released. As Captain Hopkins was sick and unfit for duty, he could be spared without any loss to the service.

BLISS BEGINS BABBLING.

After a Long Silence on Star Route Matters he at Last Follows the Example of Others and Talks Freely.

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—Bliss, government counsel, speaking to an interviewer to-day, said he was going to break an old rule of his of never being interviewed. Then answering questions, speaking for himself, he said regarding the charge that he had selected the lesser star route culprits, and passed over the greater ones, that he took the cases as he found them. The case against Dorsey had been kept by MacVeagh, Gibson and Cook, as they agreed, under the instructions of and the instigation of Garfield, as ones to be prosecuted.

"It was represented the case was ready for trial, and it was only upon that understanding," said Col. Bliss, "that, having refused before to enter, I went into the cases. After I had associated myself with the government counsel in these cases, much to my surprise I found the case against Dorsey and his associates was not ready for trial. I prepared it during six months almost alone, providing all the time against other cases excepting by [illegible].

[illegible] NARRATION.

I prepared the indictments against J. B. Price, Miner [illegible] and others. As to the Saulsburys and Pinkerton, I presented five cases to the grand jury that indicted Dorsey and was surprised that they did not [illegible] against them. The fact was accepted as indicative that I was mistaken in my judgment of what constituted necessary evidence to convict them. I thereupon agreed to refer to arbitrators the question whether Saulsbury, and other defendants, had received any money from the government which they ought to repay. It was agreed that this arbitration should not prevent the government from resorting to other proceedings either civil or criminal upon these routes. The arbitrators consisted of Elmer, second assistant postmaster general, who has been an efficient agent in cutting off all fraudulent star route claims, Col. Ingersoll, as representative of the defendants, and myself. It was agreed the arbitrators should act by the majority and should act upon any evidence satisfactory to them, whether it be strictly legal or not. I regarded it then and do regard it as substantially placing the Saulsburys and Pinkerton in the hand of the government. So far as routes were concerned it was

[illegible]

And myself each separately to substitute some one in our place. Ingersoll did not take advantage of the agreement, but I substituted Lyman, chief clerk of A. E. Elmer, whose position with reference to the star routes is beyond question. The arbitration was regarded as giving great advantage to the government. It does not bar criminal proceedings. The Saulsburys are made responsible for all the indemnities, who were put forward as nominal contractors; so if any of them have government money the Saulsburys must pay it; and while if it went to a suit the most the government could get would be a bare judgment. As to the Saulsburys and others it is a remarkable fact that the files of the postoffice department are singularly devoid of records; so devoid that while I have no evidence upon the subject I cannot but feel the papers have been removed from the files of the department since public attention was attracted to the matter. My feeling is intensified by what I now as to the infidelity of some persons at one time connected with the investigation of these cases. As to Saulsbury and others there is this distinction between them and the Dorsey combination. The latter so treated all their subcontractors and employes that all of them are ready and willing to be witnesses for the government, freely tell all they know and freely surrender all papers in their possession that could in any wise aid the government. Saulsbury and others seemed to have understood how to attach their subordinates [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] at the time he was likely to have returned to Canada. Early in October I commenced again to try to find him and have since employed the postoffice authorities, the marshal of Nevada and Pinkerton's detectives. We have spent not less than $1000 in endeavoring to find him. He has lived in an inaccessible region where everybody about him was in his interest and warning has been given of the approach of every stranger. His wife has stated to various persons that he was in California and other places, while we believed he was hiding in the immediate vicinity. We will follow and get him and bring him [illegible] to the amount it cost us to get him here. I don't know how he would testify but he has said what would be beneficial to the government. His energy in avoiding us convinces us his knowledge is important. The government will have much new evidence at this trial."

The Stocks Investigation

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 20.—At the executive meeting of the San Francisco stock and exchange board today, the investigating committee submitted the following report which was received and placed on file:

"To the San Francisco Stock and Exchange Board: Gentlemen: Your committee desire to report progress and submit the following: Attention having been called to the Bullion Mining Co., we have had a partial examination made of their management. We find no work has been done on the mine for about 10 months. It is now in charge of a watchman. We consider the management recklessly extravagant and characterized by a total disregard of the rights of stockholders. With reference to the Belcher and Crown Point mines, the Belcher mine had produced from May, 1881 to December, 1882, 28,154 tons of ore, the value of which we are unable to determine, such evidence as we could obtain placing the value at from $10 to $13 per ton. This ore was sold to the mills for 50 cents per ton, and the parties buying said ore were allowed to use the company's shaft and works to raise the ore to the surface.

We find the Crown Point mine produced from March, 1881, to December, 1882, [illegible] tons under similar conditions, and it was [illegible] for 50 cents per ton. These mines are still producing about 5000 tons per month on the terms as before stated. The Crown Point company pays a tax, office expenses and a superintendent at $500 per month, who has also a clerk at $175 per month. These two mines are managed badly and with a total disregard of the rights of stockholders.

Many other [illegible] been mentioned which must be deferred to a later date.

We consider the proxy system one of the greatest evils in corporations, enabling people to control mines and [illegible] in their own interest, who do not own stock, and we earnestly recommend that this board take some action in the matter for the better protection of stockholders.

THE INDIANS.

Both the secretary of the interior and the commissioner of Indian affairs discuss the question of allotment of lands in severalty to the Indians of the various reservations. It is noticeable that they do not agree on the subject. The secretary opposes such allotment; the commissioner favors it. In support of his position the secretary urges that the right of property as recognized by the Indian is the right in his clan; that is, all right to the soil and to the products thereof inhere in the clan; and he who takes land in severalty, or cultivates the common soil to the exclusion of others, is guilty of a crime against society. This would seem to be putting the case too strongly. In isolated instances the fact may be as stated; but it certainly is not correct to say that Indians as a rule could hold it to be a crime to divide the land on an equitable principle, giving each one his proper share. Whether all Indians would as yet be prepared to use to advantage lands allotted to them individually would be another question. But the sooner they can be taught to do this the better.

The commissioner argues the case from the opposite point of view. Instead of titles to tribes he insists on titles to individuals, believing that in a great measure the future welfare and prosperity of the Indians depend upon giving them a several interest in their lands, with such title as will protect them and their children in the peaceful enjoyment thereof. This he urges because the allotment system tends to break up tribal relations; because it has the effect of creating individuality, responsibility and a desire to accumulate property, and because it teaches the Indians habits of industry and frugality, and stimulates them to look forward to a better and more useful life. And, in the end, it will relieve the government of large annual appropriations. Clearly the commissioner has the better argument. So long as the government continues to feed the Indian and to encourage him in his lazy, indolent and vagabond life, so long will it be idle to expect him to make any real progress.

But on another very important point the secretary and the commissioner are agreed. They insist alike on the policy of maintaining common and industrial schools for Indian youth, and of increasing the number, capacity and efficiency of the schools. The commissioner presents at length the results already attained at Carlisle, Forest Grove and Hampton, as well as at the reservation boarding and day schools; and the record is a most encouraging one. It is certainly cheaper, as it is in every way more desirable, to educate the Indians than to fight them; and when the Indian children are away at school there is small probability that their fathers will engage in war. One million dollars a year will go far towards providing means for instruction of all the Indian youth of the United States; but one million dollars will seldom go far towards defraying the cost of quelling an outbreak of a single tribe. If the Indian is to be civilized we must depend for the work on civilized methods. This is becoming more and more the policy of the government, and it is meeting, on the whole, with encouraging success.

THE MORGAN STORY.

The publication of Mr. Weed's statement about the death of Morgan has been met by many denials. It is asserted that the story is mainly a figment, which, however, had been impressed in so many ways upon Mr. Weed that he had come to regard it in all its details as entirely true. Having through many years been accustomed himself to accept every suggestion that could support his theory, it is declared that he was incapable of forming a correct judgment on the subject even from his own materials. In the Cincinnati Enquirer a statement is published by a relative of the John Whitney mentioned by Weed in his statement of "facts," which denies that the former ever had any connection with the Morgan matter and expresses the belief that Weed was prompted by malice in the use of Whitney's name. This last, however, seems entirely improbable. But the writer furnishes stronger proof of his denial of Whitney's agency in the affair than Mr. Weed produced in support of it.

Here is another version of the Morgan story: A telegram to the New York Herald states that Thomas Forbes of Clyde, Wayne county, New York, who is nearly eighty years of age and whose father was a cousin of William Morgan, asserts that Morgan was not murdered by his captors, but was released on condition that he would leave the country. Forbes states that he did so, going to Melbourne, Australia. There he began the publication of a newspaper, which, after his death, passed into the hands of his son, who, Forbes thinks, may now be living in that locality.

A POOR QUALITY OF "REFORM."

The reform of the civil service has not been a favorite measure with the democratic party in any of the states in which that party has had control, but in respect to such reform in states not democratic, and in the national government, they have been very clamorous for its adoption. During the campaign of 1876, when the democrats believed that they would make Tilden president, and again in 1880, when they felt even more sanguine of the election of Gen. Hancock, they ceased to urge reform in the civil service; but it was only for a time, for so soon as their hopes of getting the offices had vanished they struck up the tune for reform again. Now again political events have created in them the hope that they may gain the coming presidential contest; and once more there is courage in the party to proclaim the doctrine that "to the victors belong the spoils." This is the talk in congress. It will suggest to many who have complained of the failure of the republican party to satisfy all the demands of the country on this subject whether anything is to be gained for the civil service by putting into power the party which insists that the proper "reform" will consist merely in making the civil service a democratic partisan machine.

A correspondent of the New York Tribune, writing from Louisville on the position of the southern democrats on the tariff question, argues that the north and south will probably change their views on the subject, if they have not already done so, the latter becoming strong protectionists, while the former drifts toward a tariff for revenue. He thinks this result is because of the fact that the manufacturing interests of the north have grown strong enough to go alone, while those of the south, being in their infancy, need the fostering care which made the former so prosperous. He says the southern manufacturers are so weak that they cannot afford to tolerate those persons who favor a sudden and radical reversal of a policy of which they are now beginning to reap the fruit. All of which points to difficulties which hedge the path of the democratic party on the tariff question.

Judge Belford, Colorado's representative in congress, known in his mountain home as the "red-headed rooster of Gilpin," and in Washington as the "crimson-crested Cicero of Colorado," now comes to the front as a senatorial candidate. He proposes to back his brains and oratory against the millions of his bonanza opponents, Chaffee, Tabor, Bowen and Hamill. If Chaffee's recent defeat and Belford's return to congress may be taken as prophetical, the latter will succeed Chaffee, who is filling Senator Teller's unexpired term.

The plan of the engineers for the improvement of the mouth of the Columbia river is substantially that recommended by Col. Gillespie, only from Point Adams in a northwesterly direction so as to narrow the entrance, change somewhat the direction of the current and make a deeper and nearly straight channel. In his report published about two years ago Col. Gillespie demonstrated the practicability of the plan.

It is remarked that the feverish anxiety for an early trial manifested by the star route defendants when proceedings were first talked of by ex-Postmaster-General James more than a year ago is in singular contrast to their present efforts to postpone proceedings in their cases. The country will fully appreciate the situation and note with pleasure this evidence that the officers for the prosecution are in earnest in the business.

The average rainfall at Sacramento during the past years, up to and including the 11th December of each season has been 3.03 inches. This season it was 6.0 inches. The Californians think they are getting a good start on rain this year.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST.

Southern Oregon.

Jacksonville supports a singing school this winter.

The people of Wagner creek, Jackson county, have petitioned for a postoffice.

An unusually large amount of bacon, ham and lard will be made in Jackson county this season.

C. H. Pickens, one of the enterprising citizens of Table rock precinct, Jackson county, has secured the contract for delivering 1000 cords of wood at the Grave creek tunnel.

There is a project on foot to build a wharf at Port Orford, which is very much needed, as at the present time all freight must be landed in a surf boat. The business already calls for such an improvement and the increasing trade will make it a paying investment.

Washington Territory.

The flouring mill of Roodeman & Bothman, at Chehalis, began work last Saturday and is in successful operation to-day. This is one of the most valuable improvements in Lewis county.

A tannery has been established near Ferndale, on the Nooksack, by an experienced workman named W. R. Bauman, who has already turned out some fine samples of buckskin and furs that command the highest market price.

A steam sawmill and shingle factory has been established at Ferndale, principally to supply local demand on the Nooksack river for lumber and shingles, but of sufficient capacity to supply some of the ordinary outside demand.

Idaho.

The Mayflower mine, of Bullion, retained its leading position this year, and yielded 700 tons of first-class ore carrying an average of 170 ounces of silver and about 70 per cent. lead, valued at about $180,000. Owing to the lack of transportation facilities the yield was not half as large as it might have been, and several hundred tons of ore remained on the dumps. The ore breasts are in fine shape, and the extraction of ore can be resumed as early as desired in the spring. The Mayflower mine was sold to Mr. Farrell, the Chicago merchant prince, and a few associates, last February, for $375,000. If the present owners had so desired they could have extracted the entire purchase price during the past six months.

FRESH PITH.

Over 500 New Yorkers are simply delirious with grief to think they can't make themselves appear the cause of the Langtry-Labouchere quarrel.—Boston Post.

Boston is cultured, no doubt, but there is a trifling incongruity in her singing the "Hallelujah Chorus" from the "Messiah" for the benefit of the Russian Jews.—New Haven Register.

An English physician reckons up 70 diseases which come from the use of alcoholic drinks. We know men who prefer the whole category of diseases to missing one drink.—New Haven Register.

A man in Springfield, Mo., poured out a glass of whisky, looked at it a moment, and then dropped dead. This should be a warning to all men to drink their whisky as soon as they pour it out.—Arkansaw Traveler.

The khedive wants to go to England to see the queen and her subjects. If the khedive will stay at home he will see all he wants of the English. We should not think he would care to Seymour.—Texas Siftings.

Miss Marguerite (to Palihard, stroke of class crew): "You treat my kitten, Mr. Palihard, very much as you did your crew of last spring." "What do you mean?" "Why, you stroke it the wrong way."—Harvard Lampoon.

Sarony is said to have given Mrs. Langtry $5000 for the privilege of photographing her. If he uses the old-fashioned instruments of torture for holding a victim's head steady, the price is none too high.—Philadelphia News.

A colored preacher at Barnesville, Ga., reproved a sister of the church for wearing a silk dress when her husband could not pay his debts, and she stood up and told the minister that he now owed all his tea, sugar and butter, and never paid anything back. Then a solemn hush fell upon the meeting.—Detroit Free Press.

An Account of Mrs. Langtry.

As a specimen of the severe style of holding up the mirror to nature by one woman for another, we republish the following criticism made upon Mrs. Langtry by a lady correspondent of the Providence Herald. Men swear that Mrs. Langtry is handsome and fascinating, but listen to what madam, the critic, says:

Last evening we went to see Mrs. Langtry, and such a disappointment as she was! She has milk-and-water blue, or grey, eyes, with light brown hair as straight as an Indian. A long, thin face, with what we would consider an ordinary complexion. Her throat is very small and thin to a fault. She has hardly the sign of a bust, and her back is anything but handsome. Her arm is not pretty, being of the same size from the elbow to the wrist. Her neck, chest and hand did not compare favorably with the actress who assisted her. She is no actress at all—not even graceful. At the close of an act she was called out to receive some flowers. She shot out to the front of the stage, grabbed them in the first place she could get hold of them, nodded her head and shot off again. The smile that has been so much talked about spoils her face, instead of enhancing her beauty, for when she laughs or speaks she draws up her upper lip so as to show her gums, giving an ugly expression. Her teeth are handsome. Her dresses are severely English—ugly as possible; but one thing I did like about them, that was their simplicity; there was none of that extravagance we usually see displayed on the stage in America. There are hundreds of handsomer women in New York to-day. The English are easily suited if her style pleases them.

The Pacific says with great gravity: "After January a purse not emptied gives greater joy than a trunk full of knick-knacks. A little by play is good, but much of it costs more than it comes to. First of all, coolly decide what you will not buy, then let fancy go for the rest." The latter part of this holiday advice is somewhat obscure, but to decide what not to buy is just the most difficult thing for paterfamilias to do at this season.

The western spirit that triumphs over all difficulties is put apt illustration at the late election in New Mexico. There 2[illegible] votes were cast for delegate, and Mr. Luna received a majority of 16,540 over Mr. Hares. Mr. Hares, however, has retained four prominent lawyers to contest Mr. Luna's election. Mr. Hares is evidently one of those who don't know when he is defeated.

Bibulous Belgium leads the world in tippling. The 5,000,000 inhabitants of that little country annually consume about 60,300,000 quarts of alcoholic liquors. There is an average of one public house to every twelve adult male Belgians, and in some parts of the country the supply is nearly twice as great.

Resolved, That notice be given that the common council propose to improve Eleventh street from the south line of B street to the south line of Morrison street, by constructing sidewalks, crosswalks, and box gutters and macadamizing, heretofore by the [illegible] with stone block gutters on intersections, and doing the necessary grading therefor. FATAL CASUALTY.

CONSTANT McMILLEN KILLED BY A FALLING ELEVATOR.

A Remarkable and Somewhat Unaccountable Accident—The "Cage" with Without Support and Falls Fifty Feet.

[illegible] McMillen [illegible] the Osgater, which was used in carrying merchandise to the upper stories [illegible] distance of fifty feet. He [illegible] breathing when picked up [illegible] physicians were summoned, but death ensued before their arrival [illegible]

[illegible]

Two theories are advanced as to what caused the reverse motion of the hoist. One is that when McMillen pulled the check line to stop the platform in its ascent, he not only closed the valve against the upward motion, but opened it for the downward motion. The other theory is that some person, on one of the lower floors accidentally pulled the check line and now fears to acknowledge it. Ordinarily the platform or "cage" will descend as soon as the hoist is reversed, and if it has started down of its own weight by steady, the accident would not have occurred. It is possible that a chip got between the edge of the platform and the opening in the floor, thus wedging and holding it, or being near the top of the building, the platform could not overbalance the weight of the steel rope on the other side of the pulley, and was thus held.

The deceased was a son of James McMillen, of East Portland, and was known as an industrious, worthy young man. His age was 20 years.

Murphy, Grant & Co. had issued orders forbidding any employe, except the man in charge, from touching the elevator. They will take every precaution to prevent a repetition of the occurrence. The accident will have the effect of causing the firms using elevators to post notices on every floor, warning all concerned of [illegible] to tamper with the apparatus, of using the signals between the different floors, and above all, of providing each elevator with patent safety clutches.

CAREER CUT SHORT.

The Forger of Bank Checks Arrested—He Declares his Innocence.

The man mentioned in yesterday's OREGONIAN as having successfully swindled a number of merchants by passing forged checks, was arrested last night by Policeman Barry, at his lodgings, 207 First street. On Tuesday evening he procured a blank check on the First National bank, from Walter Niles, bookkeeper for Brigham & Weeks, which he drew for $28 and tendered to Eugene Protzman, of Protzman & DeFrance, in payment of a pair of shoes, receiving $23 in change. The name of John E. Foster was signed to the check, but when it was presented for payment the paying teller said, "No you don't. I have had that fired on me too often," and it then appeared that it was another of the forged checks which have been frequently presented of late. The police were informed of the matter, and by advice of the chief several of the parties who had been swindled kept a lookout on the streets for the forger. Toward evening he was spotted by one of them and his arrest made. He was taken to the city jail where he protested his innocence. Several of the parties swindled were sent for.

Frank Myers, barkeeper for Ben Walleman, who was one of the first victims, recognized the man arrested as the person who passed the forged check on him several weeks ago. The prisoner gave his name as C. J. Murphy and Eugene Protzman also identified him. By this time Murphy's wife had arrived and when Chas. Cornelius was looking at the prisoner she exclaimed, "For God's sake don't stand staring at the man; say something." Cornelius said he recognized the prisoner as the man who swindled him. Murphy was requested to write the signatures of some of the parties whose names he had forged and they were found to correspond exactly with those on the check.

An OREGONIAN reporter interviewed the prisoner after he was placed in a cell. He declined to make any statement other than that he was innocent, and modestly requested that no mention of his arrest be made in this journal, as he did not wish any newspaper notoriety. On this understanding he stated that he had been here only three weeks, and to-day he would give bonds and fix everything all right. He said he had been a custom house inspector in San Francisco under Tim Shannon and was well acquainted with the wholesale liquor dealers in that city. Last evening he went out with his wife to buy some toys for his child, a girl about six years old, and on his return, to his great surprise, was arrested. The prisoner is a burly looking fellow about five feet ten inches in height, with red face, cavity mustache, thin sandy hair, slightly curly. While talking with the reporter the sweat stood in great drops on his forehead. Policeman Barry returned to the prisoner's rooms with his wife and made a search, but found none of the goods purchased with the forged checks, except a pair of nearly new boots.

THE EAST SIDE.

A wedding is on the tapis for this evening.

The down train of the O. R. & N. Co. did not arrive till 3 o'clock yesterday.

Frank Paye is constructing a new engine of sufficient power for the operation of his cars.

Mrs. Emil Ing, of Milwaukie, died on Monday last after a lingering illness and was buried Tuesday.

Mrs. R. Partridge, of Seattle, is visiting her sister, Mrs. D. D. Neer, and will remain here until after the holidays.

Property-owners who have not yet paid their school-taxes in district No. 21 will now have the privilege of paying them to the sheriff.

One of the O. R. & N. Co.'s new engines was taken yesterday to The Dalles, where she will be provided with an air pump. The other is now being set up at Albina.

P. C. McCumber, who was recently stricken with paralysis, was able to be on the streets yesterday. His right side and power of speech are still much affected.

Considerable sickness prevails among the inhabitants of Water street, south of L. The characteristics of the locality render it necessarily injurious to health.

Jay Rial's show bills have taken possession of the bulletin boards in this city, but our citizens' enjoyment of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" will probably not extend beyond the bulletin boards if the river boom continues.

The news of the horrible death yesterday of Constant McMillen, of East Portland, was received here with much consternation and regret, he being generally noted to be one of the most exemplary and promising young men in the city.

A Chinese peddler of dry goods and fancy articles has been doing the city for the past few days, and it is surprising how readily people who clamor against the heathen will patronize them when their patronage redounds to their own benefit.

The city surveyor will this morning commence the survey for the proposed elevated sidewalk on the south side of L street. It is not thought advisable for the present to extend it any further than First street or the east side of the railroad track.

The need of telephonic connection with Portland is felt more during high water than at any other time. The facility at such a time as the present, would go far to restore the public growth of the inconvenience of communication with the west side.

Lily Lodge, I. O. G. T., of this city, decided at their regular meeting Tuesday evening to give a dime sociable on the evening of Tuesday, Dec. 26th. One dime will admit a person to literary and musical entertainment, refreshments, and a general good time.

A gentleman of this city recently received a communication from a court on the name of "Portland" charging him with encroaching on the property of the latter and summoning him to appear and show cause why he should not be expelled. It was simply a mistake resulting from a resemblance of names. [illegible] was never known to be out of that stripe.

John M. Payne, son of W. H. Payne, of Columbia Slough, and Miss Annie Moran, daughter of Thos. Moran, were married last evening at the residence of the bride's parents in the southern outskirts of the city, near the car shops, Rev. Father Mackin officiating. A large number of relatives and friends were present to witness the ceremony. A reception followed, with music and dancing and an elegant supper. Presents were numerous and costly expressive of esteem, and the happiness wished the contracting parties by the donors.

MINING NEWS.

Jacksonville Times, Dec. 15.

Miners want more rain.

The iron deposits of Jackson county are attracting more attention than ever.

A. W. Sturgis of Forest creek is still drifting and has sufficient water for present purposes.

C. W. Burrage and others are still prospecting the hills in the vicinity of Rock Point for iron ore.

Springstead & Co. have an arastra at work at their quartz ledge at the head of Wagner creek. The prospects are promising.

B. L. Fielder came over from Kerbyville this week, from whom we learned that many of the miners of Josephine county are busy.

DeLamatter Bros. are ground-sluicing at their claim near Kerbyville, while DeLamatter & Newman will soon have their flume in and will then be ready for an extended run.

R. W. Dartekson of Horsehead, Josephine county, visited Jacksonville this week. He informs us that the quartz mill has been shut down for the present, and that considerable ore of excellent quality is being taken out daily.

H. T. Hutchins of Galice creek is in town, from whom we learn that Green Bros. are again taking out a considerable quantity of rich ore. They have not crushed any since July, but have run a winze, with excellent results.

One of the firm of Saltdon Bros., Portland, who built the quartz mills that are being used at the Blackwell and Horsehead mines, is now at the former, and will see that both are put in the best running order before he returns.

There are fewer white miners at work on Galice creek this season than usual and more Chinese. Walter Simmons' mine is the only one that is being worked on an extensive scale, both the English and Blue Gravel companies having suspended for the present.

David Brickell, of Wolf creek, was in Jacksonville this week, who reported the miners of that section prepared for an extended run. The Portland company by which he is employed have a Pelton pipe set in position and expect to be able to commence working soon.

A nugget of gold was on exhibition at the banking house of A. B. Carlock, Fort Jones, Cal., last week, that attracted much attention. It weighed forty ounces, and was valued at $2500; but it was worth almost its old to the finder, Sam Howard, a miner on Indian creek, near Happy Camp, who has been quite unfortunate of late and in straightened circumstances.

Uncle Myers has taken out of pawn all the large quantity of diamonds and jewelry he has been accumulating for the last two years, and will offer them on exhibition and for sale this week at prices as reasonable as [illegible] Christmas and New Year's presents. 134 First street.

THURSDAY MORNING, DEC. 21, 1882

THE LOST BRIDEGROOM.

In a rugged and mountainous district of Wales, is situated a mining village noted for this little story which the miners tell to their children.

Years ago in the little village [illegible] was an humble but neatly kept cottage, where an old miner dwelt with his wife and only child a son. And Alick was but a young boy when he first descended into the mines with his father.

One evening, as the old miner was returning home from a neighboring village, his attention was attracted by a little girl. She was weeping bitterly. A few broken, almost incoherent words told that she had been deserted by her mother. The child weary and hungry had cried itself to sleep and while she was sleeping the unnatural parent had forsaken her.

The old man was touched by the incident. Raising her tenderly in his arms, he wended his way homeward. Entering the cottage he placed the light burden in his wife's lap, saying:

"God in His wisdom has seen fit to choose our home from all the other homes in the village to shelter this deserted child. Knowing your kind heart, wife, I did not fear to bring the little one to you."

The dame pressed the good man's hand affectionately in reply, and Amy—for so the child was called—was soon seated before a simple repast.

Alick, on his return from the parish school, welcomed the little girl with every expression of pleasure.

Years passed away, and Amy's childhood days were spent.

Without great claims to beauty, there was, nevertheless, a charm about her which all recognized.

The miner and his wife were not surprised when Alick one day asked them for their consent to make Amy his wife, and to this request they accorded their heartfelt blessing.

The day for the rustic nuptials was named, and was looked forward to as an occasion of general rejoicing. The happy day arrived; work was suspended that all might join in the merry-making.

Taking the hand of the trembling girl within his own, Alick, according to the long established custom of the village, led the way to the little, vine-covered church, where the parish priest blessed their love. Children strewed flowers by the wayside and sang gay songs. Each guest had made a modest offering, but no one would Alick confide the nature of his gift, wishing, as he did, to excite an agreeable surprise.

When they had returned to the cottage Alick kissed his wife, telling her he would leave her but for a short season. He left the house, and, with one last, lingering look at the doorway where Amy stood waving a merry adieu, he hurried off in the direction of the old mines and a curve in the road soon hid him from view. As his little figure disappeared Amy uttered a faint sigh, suggestive of a dull foreboding evil or the fallness of her mirthful joy.

Days passed, and search had been made everywhere. Weeks followed; then months. But the bridegroom did not return. Nor could his absence and strange disappearance be accounted for. No clew was gained by those who searched untiringly. At length hope was abandoned. The widowed bride clung tenaciously to one idea, which seemed almost like a folly, in life or death, she would see her husband again before she was called away from earth. This belief afforded her comfort, and the neighbors, while they did not share the conviction, humored her in the thought, and spoke regretfully of the sad changes that sorrow had wrought in her fresh young face.

Forty years were gone, and but for the sad, wistful face of old Amy, the whispered stories of the peasantry, the unaccountable disappearance of Alick would have been forgotten. But the tale told in an under breath by many a hearth was, that Alick had been carried off by an evil spirit, with whom he had held compact. Many even went so far as to say that his soul haunted the old cottage, and had been seen during stormy nights in the mountains. Amy indeed asserted that she often heard his voice calling her, and the light that burned always from nightfall until dawn in her casement told that her heart ever kept vigil over his fate.

The old cottage continued to be thought haunted by ghostly visitors, and because of this superstition none would occupy it. It gradually fell into decay. The women of the village rarely passed the dead miner's house without offering a prayer for the restless soul.

The old mines having been worked, it was at length determined that new excavations should be opened. Amid the operations a subterranean murmur was heard mingling with the sound of the pike. Suddenly a wailing cry rent the air, and the earth seemed to tremble. Those above rushed in terror to the mouth of the pit, and the most fearless were about to descend, when the call-bell was rung violently. Every rope was at once put to use, while the miners were white and trembling with intense fear.

To every inquiry they accorded the most disconnected replies, such as "a man," "a demon," "a miracle." At length from one old man they garnered that they had worked steadily to open communication between the new and the old mine, but finding only a small obstruction, at last a sturdy blow was made, and the dividing wall had given way; that when the cloud of dust had passed from before their astonished eyes they saw a young man; that he was lying upon a rocky bed; he seemed to be sleeping; that his cheeks looked fresh and fair, and that his lips were still red. Instead of approaching him they had fled in fright, filled with the belief that it was an evil spirit in human guise that they beheld.

The owner of the mine listened attentively. As the old man ceased he rushed forward exclaiming: "To the mine! To the mine!" Soon the truth was known. Ere many minutes three miners issued forth, bearing between them the body of the young man. With a feeling of irrepressible horror they laid him low upon the green sward. His clothes were old and indicated a style worn years and years ago; all were, however, in a perfect state of preservation. He seemed dressed as though for a fete. In his hand he held a box. It contained a gold cross, chain and medallion. Time had blackened these little pledges which the stranger had doubtless intended for some village maiden.

They were about to raise the body and bear it away for burial, when old Amy was seen approaching.

They made way for her, and those near at hand were struck by the singular expression of her face. Her eyes sparkled with new life, and her steps, usually so feeble, seemed almost to have gained the elasticity of youth. Waving them aside by an imposing dignity, she advanced directly toward the dead man. Kneeling she parted the dark hair on his brow and murmured, in a tone of inexpressible love and tenderness, his name—"Alick!"

At once all was clear. In an instant the old people present recognized the companion of their youth. Again she spoke:

"Alick, friend of my childhood, my husband, I knew that we would meet again on earth!"

As she ceased speaking, her head dropped lower and lower, until it sank upon his breast, as if in prayer.

At length the young men advanced to remove the body. Gently the women raised the figure of the forlorn woman. Seeing that she made no resistance, they bent over her, and found that she, too, was dead. Her long, loving vigil was at an end. The same grave holds them both, and many a sweet flower is laid upon it in remembrance of their fate, while the legend of their love is often recounted in the humble homes of the poor.—N. Y. Daily News.

"A prudent man," says a witty Frenchman, "is like a pin. His head prevents him from going too far."

The secretary of the tariff commission, Mr. Porter, after handing in his very exhaustive report, skipped to Europe. He will remain abroad until the affair blows over.

Rates are unchanged, although lesser for some classes of freight. Tonnage is in limited supply, and freights to trans-Atlantic ports is higher. No engagements for California lines, as both have all they want for the next 60 days. The steamboat Geo. S. Homer got in berth this morning and is loading for Portland. SLAYER OF JIM FISK.

Stokes Stands in the Society of Bonanza Kings

By [illegible]

The career of Edward S. Stokes is startling. I was at Gabe Case's road house yesterday when he drove up with his beautiful team of flyers, and, upon alighting to the ground stepped into the bar-room. On every hand he was saluted with "Hello, Ed," and hands were stretched out to grasp his own. [illegible] Merchants, brokers, [illegible] lawyers, [illegible] gentlemen of leisure and men of the highest [illegible] greeted him warmly, and [illegible] to drink with them. [illegible] extraordinary? [illegible] the man who [illegible] Jim Fisk in the Grand Central hotel, was [illegible] and spent several years in a [illegible] Sing Sing. When he came [illegible] was [illegible] he became interested in a [illegible] which is [illegible] Stokes has [illegible] Hoffman [illegible] W. [illegible] in New York. After this he took [illegible] theatre [illegible] Lately he has begun to [illegible] himself though his name is carefully kept in the background for fear of the prejudice which still exists in the minds of many good citizens against the man who killed the genial and generous Jim Fisk. His very latest move, however, has been in the direction of [illegible] horses. He [illegible] a pair of [illegible] horses, named Lyman and Belle Flower. He bragged rather loudly of their speed, and a match was arranged between them and another team, which Stokes won easily [illegible] half an hour. Since then he has been very [illegible] with [illegible] of that kind. Stokes is still a handsome man, though his face is deeply lined and his hair gray. He is a [illegible] at the [illegible] and dresses with an extravagance unsurpassed by many millionaires of New York. He is popular among horsemen, [illegible] will be found. One question naturally presents itself: would he have attained his present position of influence and wealth if he had not killed Jim Fisk?

We present no pretended miracle.—"Truth is mighty, and must prevail." No sophistry can withstand the power of its honest utterance.

Editor of Kentucky Press:

DEAR SIR: Feeling deeply grateful for the great benefits which I have received from the use of a very valuable article which has recently been [illegible] in our beautiful city, and hoping that others who are afflicted as I have been may find the same relief from its use, I beg the indulgence of a few lines in your valuable paper for the privilege of communicating a brief statement of facts, for the benefit of the multitude of sufferers to be met with on every side. Many of my friends will know that I have been very severely afflicted with heart disease for a number of years, and have suffered from it as only those can suffer who have that disease. It reduced my strength so low that I could scarcely walk across my room, and the least exertion rendered me so short-breathed that I dared scarcely move, and life was not very [illegible]. I was treated for my malady by the best physicians, and derived no benefit from their treatment or prescriptions until I was advised by my family physician to use Hunt's Remedy, as my trouble was caused by inaction of my kidneys, which affected very seriously the action of my heart. [illegible] taking it [illegible] any other medicine [illegible] helped me [illegible] and I am now [illegible] better [illegible] use. In fact I [illegible] and I have gained strength [illegible] housework. I cheerfully recommend Hunt's Remedy to all who may be afflicted as I have been, or who are suffering from general debility and nervous prostration. Respectfully,

MRS. A. D. LOCKWELL,
Pearl street, Providence, R. I.

DR. PAUL F. BRENAN,

THE

Most Successful Physician on the Pacific Coast in the Treatment of

ALL CHRONIC & DIFFICULT DISEASES

DR. BRENAN WILL GUARANTEE TO CURE [illegible] form of disease of the generative organs or private disease. He has become an expert in the treatment of disease, weakness and derangement of the reproductive organs of both male and female, including diseases caused by the

FOLLIES OF YOUTH,

Such as Spermatorrhea, or Seminal Weakness, or Loss of Perfect Vitality. Nearly two-thirds of all the Chronic Diseases spring either directly or indirectly from some derangement of the sexual system, and yet this subject is neglected by the majority of the Medical Profession.

I know that persons who are unfortunate enough to be afflicted by any form of sexual disease have a delicacy in calling upon the proper physician in time, from a sense of modesty and sometimes from ignorance, and permit those diseases to exist until their constitutions become corrupted, their organization broken down, and the hope of future happiness blighted, until death becomes a welcome messenger to carry them out of their miserable existence.

Everything strictly confidential under all circumstances.

Lost manhood perfectly restored. Catarrh, Bronchitis, Throat Diseases, Skin Diseases, Rheumatism, Kidney Complaint, and all Diseases of the Eye and Ear, Stomach and Bladder, he can cure without fail.

Consultation Free, and a list of printed questions sent to those living at a distance who cannot consult him personally. Enclose postage stamp for list.

Office—132 and 134 Third St., opposite Masonic Hall. Office Hours—From 10 to 12 A.M., 1 to 5 and 7 to 8 P.M.

All letters of profession, business must be addressed to DR. PAUL M. BRENAN & CO., Portland, Oregon.

A public trial of over thirty years' duration, in every section of our country, of UDOLPHO WOLFE'S SCHNAPPS, its unsolicited indorsement by the medical faculty, and a sale unequaled by any other alcoholic distillation, have insured for it the reputation for salubrity claimed for it. For sale by all druggists and grocers.
